東川町

Higashikawa is located close to the center of Hokkaido with a population of approximately 8,600. The eastern part of Higashikawa is a mountainous area that forms a large forested district and is part of Daisetsuzan National Park which is the largest natural park in Japan. Asahidake (2,280m), the highest peak of Daisetsu Mountain Range is located in Higashikawa. Its rich forest resources and outstanding scenery of nature are highly valued as tourism resources.

Since declared as the "Town of Photography" in 1985, Higashikawa has promoted itself to be a "photogenic" town where nature, culture, and people can meet. We will pursue town development centered on the "Town of Photography" where we are open to the world, a place where people can interact globally, and is filled with smiles of people from around the world.
